Bookseller's Apprentice

George Talbot Goodspeed : Bookseller's Apprentice before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Bookseller's Apprentice:

For nearly a century, Goodspeed's in Boston was one of the world's preeminent rare book shops. The firm was founded in 1898 by Charles Eliot Goodspeed. The "Bookseller's Appentice" is written by Goodspeed's son, George, who worked at the shop, first as an employee and then as its director for over 70 years. Young Goodspeed describes the rarities which passed through the elder Goodspeed's hands, and the great collectors with who he dealt, and offers a unique glimpse into one of America's most distinguished rare book firms.
