Nigel Brown : British Gunmakers: Volume Two - Birmingham, Scotland the Regions before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised British Gunmakers: Volume Two - Birmingham, Scotland the Regions:

0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Each is excellent in its own rightBy John R. MooreThis is the second of a series of three treatises. Each is an incomplete section of the history without the others.Each is excellent in its own right, expensively bound, and the set is important for any collector of antique arms.0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Five StarsBy James HarrisonA must-have for the library of every student of British guns and rifles!0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. british gunmakers Vol 2By HeidiArthur CookAs in Vol . 1 vol 2 was an immense undertaking these two volumes are not picture books they are History books for reference for students of british gunmakers. For all historians these are true reference volumes Nigel Brown should be proud of his undertaking Arthur J Cook

Individual histories of 60 businesses with details of the serial number records An invaluable and definitive reference for any collector, shooting enthusiast, historian, or gunmaker This all-new volume sets out the history of Birmingham, Scottish, and regional gunmakers and specialist trade workers through the nineteenth and twentieth centuries. The book contains an alphabetical listing of the businesses and individuals with their dates and addresses. Separate listings identify the brand names used by them and the patents they registered along with additional information on proof marks.

About the Author Nigel Brown has been involved with the British gun trade, especially the London trade, for many years. For thirteen years, until 1991, he was legal advisor to, and subsequently secretary of, the Gun Trade Association. In addition, he sat on the legal and education team of WAGBI, now the British Association for Shooting and Conservation (BASC).
