Burleigh

Julie McKeown : Burleigh before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Burleigh:

Burgess, Dorlong and Leigh -- the fascinating story of Stoke-on-Trent pottery, the people and the pots, founded in 1851, given a new lease on life in 1999 and renamed Burgess, Dorling Leigh. Working from the original canal site factory built in 1881, with traditional designs, traditional skills and traditional machinery.

About the AuthorJulie McKeown is the author of a popular short history of "Royal Doulton" and "Burleigh: the Story of a Pottery" which was awarded the "Antiques Trade" "Gazette" Book of the Year in 2003. She has worked as a historical researcher for ceramics manufacturers, including Spode, Minton and Royal Doulton where she was employed as curator of the Sir Henry Doulton Gallery. She is especially delighted to write about the ceramics at Rode, having grown up in a cottage in Rode Park.
